BY M. QUAD.
 I counted them myself as they were taken from a Union Pacific freight car and stowed away in a government wagon and barrels. Eighty-nine bags of powder for the artillery at the fort. Then there were twelve boxes of musket cartridges, thirty percussion shells and eight stands each of canister and grape. A sergeant and five men of his had come down as escort to the four-mile team. We had a ride of thirty-seven miles, and the hostiles were on the warpath in full force. If we encountered them at all they would be in numbers—not less than fifty and perhaps a hundred. The escort should have been at least twenty-five men, but only six could be spared. The chances of getting through to the station and back were about even up.

"I hope you'll get through," said the quartermaster, as we left the fort. "It would take me half an hour to lose six horses, four mules and a pack animal." The six soldiers, who were with us, were wiped out six others would be enlisted, and a few strokes of the pen on the quartermaster's report would tell the whole story. If we were to lose six horses, four mules and a pack animal, it would be the end to the expedition.

With headquarters at Chicago, and it might take months to replace it. We had to make a night camp on our return, and "no hour" before daylight in the morning the Indians attempted to run off our stock. "Up boys, grab your guns," shouted the sergeant as the report of the sentry's carbine aroused him from slumber, and we obeyed the order with such promptness and vigor that the Indians were driven off with one dead and two wounded and a few mules and horses.

That attack settled it. They knew our strength, suspected the contents of the wagon and would try us on by daylight before we reached the fort. We speculated over it, but did not worry. We had no direct orders, but every man knew what the programme would be if attacked. If the ground was open we would keep moving along and firing from our saddles. If brought to a halt we would stand them off until no one was left to fire a shot.

"I tell you how it goes," said the sergeant, as we cooked our breakfast in the camp fire. "We shall see an Indian all we reach Wolf River. We have to turn there and cross a little valley, and they'll take us just at that spot. It may be only a war party of twenty-five, but I shouldn't wonder if old Iron Face was out with his whole gang of bucks."

The two hours we spent at the river. There had been a heavy rain up in the mountains, the night before, and the stream was bank full and running over. We turned to the east and kept along the bank and then descended into the valley. This valley was about a quarter of a mile wide, and ran north and south. Its northern end or beginning was right at the river bank, and the valley was lower than the river bed by ten feet. The bank which shut the water out was not over ten feet thick, and had been formed of trees and dirt deposited by the river in a century. We were half way across the valley when war-whoops were heard in front and behind. One party had let us pass, and then closed up in the rear, and a second was ambushed at the mouth of the pass on the east side of the valley. We were there between two fires. With this firing of the first bullet the mules swerved to the left and ran until brought up by the high bank of the river. We rode after them, and the Indians had to show themselves in the open valley. We dismounted, unharassed the mules and made the wagon protect the animals. The river protected our rear and there was open ground on each flank. As we got down on the grass and fired into the Indians in front we counted them. There were one hundred and six of them. We counted them all well mounted.

As they pressed up we killed two and wounded two others. Then they fell back to plot and plan and we had an opportunity to see the situation. "Here's the way of the land," said the sergeant, "and Gen. Miles himself could make it any day different. We are out of it in the rear by the river. The Indians have both passes and we are regularly boxed in. If we stay here it is to be wiped out. Our only show is to leave our horses and skulk up the bank of the river on foot. We hear what you have to say about it."

"Every man agreed with him. The Indians were getting ready to rush us from the front, and we could see warriors making their way along the slopes of the hills to come down on our flanks. "It's the horses and mules and powder," the war more'n our scalps," continued the sergeant. "And we'll give 'em a surprise party. Draw your knives across the throat of every animal." We were then told to get ready to fight.

As soon as we appeared light up there on the bank, said the sergeant, from the wagon, "there'll be a horse and a mule. There'll be the heads out of some of these pack animals. Now, pass 'em up again. Let's run the wagon back against the bank. That's the way. Now, I'll cut this fuse to burn for one minute, and somebody give me a match."

As soon as the end of the fuse was alight, we scrambled up the bank. The Indians raised a yell and charged down the valley in a wild mob. We did not stop to return their shouts or to fire upon them, but raced across the open to the shelter of the pines. We were thirty rods away and under cover when the earth suddenly heaved up and every man was flung down.

Then came an explosion—a sound which seemed to rend the heavens and make the hills stagger. There was one grand explosion, followed by a series of smaller ones, and in a few minutes voices, shouting in chorus, followed by the roar of waters.

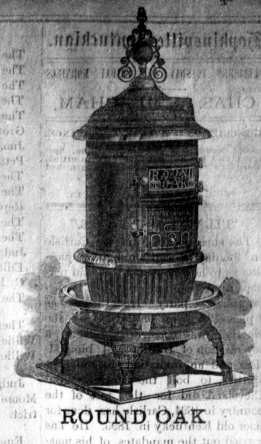

We saw a few mounted Indians riding down the valley in front of a wall of water ten feet high. We saw the wreck of the wagon and the bodies of Indians, horses and mules being borne along on the surface of the water. The explosion of the powder wagon had torn away the back and every gallon of water in the raging river had been turned round into a new channel. The flood caught up the living, the dead and dying—everything which could be carried away. In two minutes the grassy valley was under twenty feet of water. A few of the Indians who had been nearest in the charge escaped, but the badly numbered rest, as soon as they reached the fort, were cut and killed.

"All signed the quartermaster, as the story was told for his benefit. "Four mules, six horses, a wagon and all that ammunition gone, and you didn't wipe out over ninety redskins! What will the government say about it?"—Detroit Free Press.

CONSUMPTION IN GERMANY.
 The Decrease in the Rate of Mortality from Tuberculosis.
 With considerable trouble Dr. Bollinger has succeeded in procuring the mortality tables of various German cities, extending over long years, with the special intention of inquiring into the mortality from tuberculosis. From a comparison of the tables, it is certain that, as regards the large cities, such as Vienna, Berlin and Hamburg, a distinct diminution in the death rate from tuberculosis is taking place. In the city of Munich, for instance, a diminution of eighteen per cent has taken place during the last twenty-six years. In correspondence with this, the tuberculous material in the pathological institute has diminished, so that in the space of five years eight per cent fewer cases of the tubercle are met with on the post-mortem table. Formerly one-third of all post-mortem examinations were on subjects that had died from tuberculosis in some form, where they now number only one-fourth. As regards the smaller cities, the decrease is not so marked, but the doctor states that in one year twenty-one thousand cattle found to be suffering from tuberculosis were slaughtered in the Berlin slaughter houses, and that in the Kingdom of Saxony one in seven and in the "cove" four were affected with tubercle. In the years 1893 and 1894 a remarkable increase in tuberculosis in cattle took place in Schwaben, and this increase corresponded with a dearth of fodder for cattle. Dr. Bollinger mentions this fact as a wholesale experiment illustrating the effects of deficient nutrition in predisposing to disease.—Much Medical Wochenschrift.

Married Them All.
 Bridgroom, bridesmaid and best man got entangled in the parlor of Rev. C. M. Reed at Lancaster, Ky., and none of them escaped without getting married. Mr. Reed began by asking the usual questions. The groomsmen piped up cheerily in response to the bride's attendant answered with all the bluses that are supposed to wait on such an occasion. And so they were married. Then the fee was paid and they all started away perfectly satisfied. Just as they were going out one of the clergyman's household noticed something out of plumb and spoke to Mr. Reed about it. He called them back and married the right pair. The excuse was that they had never been married before. The inadvertently conjointed couple regard the matter cheerfully. So do the others.—Chicago Tribune.

"TIL VOTE AS I PLEASE."

The reply of Jno. G. Carlisle on the day he registered, to a question as to how he would vote, did perhaps more than any one thing to disorganize the party. His "Til vote as I please," coming on the eve of the election was construed to mean a repudiation of Hardin and bimetalism and an invitation to his lick-spittles to bolt the ticket. What Cleveland did for the rest of the country in 1894, Carlisle has done for poor old Kentucky in 1895. He has carried out the mandates of his master and prevented a silver man from being elected governor. But in pulling down the pillars of his party he has destroyed himself, strong man as he is, in the general wreck. The scene has changed in the drama of '96. The exit of Jno. G. Carlisle as a political quantity marks the advent of Wm. O. Bradley as a possibility for second place. But Carlisle is not entitled to all of the credit for splitting the Democratic party and delivering its leaders bound and gagged into the hands of the Philistines. The Courier-Journal, once the organ of stalwart Democracy, has done a double part in the great work of wiping out a majority of 49,000 in the state. The party in the greatest crisis of its existence, in the fight of its life, has had no state organ. If we except the half hearted support of the Times, every daily paper in Louisville has supported the Republican ticket openly or secretly. The Democratic party has been beset by foes in front and traitors in its own ranks. It has gone down in defeat, and Kentucky, the last to succumb, will have a Republican governor for the first time in its history. For years it has stood as the only one of all the states that had never faltered in its allegiance to the principles of Jefferson, but the last sentinel of the untarnished Democracy has been struck down, not by the enemy in front, but by deserters in the rear. But the Democratic party is not dead. Men may come and men may go, but principles are eternal and cannot die. The Democratic principles of home rule, untrammelled trade, honest bimetalism and liberty of conscience will survive defeat and from out of it all will come a better and a stronger party to redeem Kentucky.

Gen Hardin led his ticket even in Louisville, where he received 1,167 more votes than Tyler. The total vote of Jefferson county was Bradley 19,493, Hardin 15,796, (Tyler 15,444), Pettit 267, Demore 254. The county will have 89 votes instead of 106 in the next Democratic convention.

The crashers and their white allies have captured Kentucky. Democrats who voted for Bradley, Democrats who scratched Hardin and Democrats who stayed at home all helped to do it. Now we shall see what we shall see.

The scramble for asylum places has already begun here. Jas. F. Rogers, of the Banner, expects to be the steward and T. E. Lawson wants to be receiver.

Christian county's vote remains about the same as in 1892 when it was 2,324. The trouble is the Republicans added about 700 to theirs.

Just as we were beginning to think the worst was in, here comes the news that Wurster, Republican, has been counted in as mayor of Brooklyn.

Here in Christian county we are used to this sort of thing, but it is a new experience for the rest of the state.

Alex Tompkins got in by 12 majority in the Owensboro district, but Werner, his opponent, is already talking of a count-out.

Secretary Carlisle voted the straight Democratic ticket, but came near losing his vote by offering to show it to a by-stander.

The Duke of Marlborough and Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt were married in New York Wednesday at noon.

Lord, how it snowed!

WHAT DID IT?

The goldbugs did it. The scratchers did it. The stay-at-homes did it. The Courier-Journal did it. The crashers did it. Grover Cleveland did it. Jno. G. Carlisle did it. Pettit's Populists did it. The campaign lies did it. The clamor for a change did it. Republican organization did it. The earthquake Oct. 31 did it. The A. P. A. organization did it. Judge Breathitt, the younger, did it. Editor Edmundson admits he did it. Cy Brown doesn't deny that he did it. The secret ballot most of all did it.

There never was a minute that Willie wasn't in it. There are four Willies on the Republican ticket.

Judge H. G. Petrie beat C. B. Moore for senator in the Elkton district.

Eugene Field, the poet, died at Chicago Tuesday.

Where were you when the cyclone struck us?

Covington and Lexington elected Democratic mayors.

Bainbridge went Democratic, anyhow, by 11 majority.

AROUND AND ABOUT.

The quarterly meeting for the Hopkinsville Circuit will be held at Hebron to-morrow and Sunday. Rev. J. M. Lawson, presiding elder, will conduct the services.

The president is at work on his message to congress. The chief matter of interest will be the recommendations regarding the country's finances.

The directors of the Cotton States and International exposition will, during the present week, put up $100,000 to liquidate the floating indebtedness of the enterprise.

W. R. Williams, a fisherman, committed suicide at Nashville, by taking a large dose of morphine. Williams was 62 years of age, and took the fatal dose just after finishing a hearty dinner.

Roads entering Kansas City have been made the victim of an extensive ticket swindle, and the last in the aggregate several thousand dollars. The fraud has been traced to a scalper's office.

The authoritative statement of the liabilities and assets of Bamberger, Bloom & Co., will not be ready until next week, while the court has extended the time for completing the work until tomorrow, it is thought the work will not be completed before Wednesday.

A St. Paul (Minn.) shoe firm Tuesday closed a contract with the penitentiary officials there leasing 240 convict for a period of five years to manufacture boots and shoes. The contract price is 40 cents per man per day. The prison will now be made self-sustaining.

Billy Van Coming.

Mr. Billy Van, and his magnificent company of half a hundred artists in a superb spectacular performance of minstrelsy will appear at Holland's Opera House on next Monday night, Nov. 11.

This will be one of the events of the theatrical season, and as Mr. Van is a local favorite, the house will no doubt be crowded.

Billy Van has a number of years been conspicuous in various prominent enterprises. His first notable minstrel engagement was with Al G. Fields several seasons ago, when he created a hit, a palpable hit, throughout the country, leaving a record he had that has never been blotted out, excelled or even equalled by any other black-face comedian. After leaving Fields he held long and successful engagements with Gorman's, and Primrose and West's minstrels, and others. He has therefore acquired the art of catering to the public and knowing their tastes and dislikes. He has organized his company with much time, care and expense, selecting only the choicest American and foreign talent, and introducing in addition extensive scenic, mechanical, electrical and costume effects, involving thousands of dollars and prepared by the most skilled painters, mechanics and designers in the country.

A street cortege will be given at mid-day. Watch for it!

FLORIZEL REUTER.

A Child Whose Knowledge Seems Almost Infinite.

This Marvel of Precocity Only Four and a Half Years Knowledge More Than Some College Graduates—Some of His Specimens.

A pair of dimpled baby hands grasping a violin bow, a rosy cheek pressed against an instrument many times too large for him, a soul full of music—this was the picture that attracted Max Bendix to the wonderful little boy, Florizel Reuter. He needs no higher endorsement in the musical world than the fact that Max Bendix has taken him in charge, and predicts for him a brilliant future.

Florizel Reuter is a boy four and a half years old, yellow-haired, blue-eyed, with a sunny face full of intelligence, and as handsome as ever prince in fairy tale. He is physically perfect, and mentally nothing short of marvellous. He is able to recall events in history with as much ease as children of his age would nursery stories. He is a veritable walking encyclopedia. If this be only the possession of a wonderful memory, the marvel is less. He is particularly enthusiastic over the study of zoology. Without any effort he is able to name the animals and tell what countries they are natives of. He had a large collection of butterflies, the names of which he can give without trouble. He enjoys excursions into the woods and parks, and is able to tell at a glance the different insects and butterflies he sees there.

Machinery is a special charm for him, and he is able to draw and name every part of an engine. He writes a bold round hand. Florizel is not fond of children's games that interest them are no more to him than to a person of eighteen or twenty.

He sings in childish treble Scotch ballads, of which he is familiar with many, and recites from "Macbeth," "Hamlet" and "Julius Caesar."

Florizel is full of beautiful and poetic fancies. Through them he lives in a world of his own, which he populates according to his own ideas. In a storm he hears voices singing. Trills, beautiful runs and arpeggios come to his ear in the varying tones of the wind. One night, awakened from a sound sleep by the wind, he sat up and listened with the most delighted look, and said to his mamma: "Listen now; the wind is blowing in G," and, as it increased or decreased, he would note at once the change in tone and give the key.

Florizel has only heard one opera, "Sigfried," but is familiar with the Bitterroot of a number. He reads them with perfect ease, and can repeat the entire story from memory of any of them that he has read. He has a novel way of entertaining himself. He will take his violin and surround himself, in imagination, with the old masters, for whom he will play. So real is their presence that he will beg his mamma not to sit on certain chairs, as she would sit on Wagner, Schumann, Schubert, etc. Again, he will make up his audience from the characters of some favorite opera, oftentimes making the part of some hero or heroine himself. Some of the selections which he plays are Schubert's "Moments Musical," Weber's "Romanza," Raff's "Coratina," Dancie's "Fifth Air," Debussy's "Oberon," variations, Schumann's "Traumerei," Dancie's "Six Airs" and David's "Scherzo."

He is not forced in any line, but enters into everything that he does with a zest that proves he finds in all a genuine pleasure. To improvise, to put it in his way, to play what he thinks. This is with him a pet diversion. Being granted permission to do this he took up his little violin with an almost caressing touch, grasped the bow in the small hand, and with a dreamy, far-away look in his eyes, as if feeling what those about him could not, he began. The notes came first soft and sweet, then grew louder and sweeter, until they seemed a kind of jumble of twittering sound. This, he told us, was the birds singing. Then the baby face grew a bit more serious, the brows were slightly contracted, the eyelids drooped as if he was under some spell, and a dragon had appeared to his imagination. Still another change came, and a witch had come to carry off a baby, the tones of the wailing baby were produced, a sad look came into the blue eyes, which soon were dispelled by the bird notes once again. At these phrases he seems to be lifted out of himself and as though under the influence of some spirit of music.

A fair idea of the precocity of the child can be gained from the fact that recently, during a visit to the residence of Lyman J. Gage, in the presence of a number, he was questioned on points in anatomy, history, geography, zoology and the various sciences. The examination lasted a considerable time, the questions and answers were taken down by a stenographer, and it was found that the child hadn't made a single error in his replies.

THE CHILD IS HIS NEPHEW.

Perplexing Difficulty in Which William Sargent Finds Himself.

William Sargent, a young man of Vanceburg, Ky., finds himself in the peculiar position of being a bigamist, a brother-in-law to his own wife and uncle to his child, which will, when big enough, call him father. And to make his burden still harder to bear Mrs. Kate Evans, an estimable widow of Vanceburg, is twice his mother-in-law.

A few years ago Sargent married Rosa Evans and lived with her a few months. Then he went west to seek his fortune. After two years the report came that he was dead and his wife discarded her weeds a year later and married again. Sargent suddenly turned up in his old home. There was no divorce, but an agreement was entered into by which husband No. 2 was to retain possession of the wife, while Sargent wooed and won Mary, his wife's younger sister. A few weeks after the second marriage the young man again left for parts unknown. A year ago the report came to Vanceburg that he had been killed in Cuba, and wife No. 2 married Charles Simpler, to whom she bore a son.

The other morning Mary and Rosa, while sitting on the front porch of the house they jointly occupy, were astounded to see Sargent coming up the road. Another agreement was proposed, but Sargent refused to entertain it, saying he was going to stay home this time and wanted his wife Mary and the child. Simpler had other alternatives, but chose the simpler way out of the perplexing difficulty. He packed his baggage, kissed his wife good-by and left for Ohio.

Sargent is now in full possession of the house, but doesn't seem to know just where he is, and it will take considerable calculating of genealogical and domestic problems to set him exactly right.

Here is a point for those who believe in the theory of the transmutation of seeds to consider. Mr. True, of the dairy department of the agricultural college, while examining some chaff used in packing ice in the icehouse, in which were some seeds of chess, discovered that the latter had germinated, and slender rootlets piercing the ice in some cases to the depth of one and one-half inches. Only two other varieties of seed—rye and mustard—are known to germinate at the temperature of ice.

Our friends complain of our doggedness. And say it is getting stale. But we want as little up on Grover, as we do on a new coat of paint.
The only way they can stop us. Or for a time we will be. To keep on selling Furniture. And give us more by PYLE & RENSHAW.

Nearly every family in the United States keeps a bottle of whiskey in the house. This applies as well to Iowa, Kansas and Vermont as to States where its sale is prohibited. Some keep it as a beverage, some as a tonic, some as a medicine. In either case it is important that it should be old and pure.

J. W. Harper's Nelson County, Ky. Whiskey has been examined by the leading chemists throughout the country and its purity has in every case been highly recommended.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Good Thing It was Issued Before the Election.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—President Cleveland today issued a proclamation designating Thursday, November 25, as Thanksgiving Day. The proclamation says:

"The constant goodness and forbearance of Almighty God, which have been vouchsafed to the American people during the year which is just past, call for their sincere acknowledgment of devout gratitude. To the end, therefore, that we may, with thankful hearts, unite in extolling the loving care of our Heavenly Father, I, Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart Thursday, the twenty-eighth day of the present month of November, as a day of Thanksgiving and prayer, to be kept and observed by all our people."

Wednesday the mercury ran up to 80 degrees. Yesterday was but little cooler and Indian summer now holds full sway. Eight days ago it was six degrees below the freezing point.

Queer Misunderstandings.

The conversation one Saturday night in the shop turned upon the misunderstandings caused between customer and clerk by a similarity of sounds. It was told of the tool man that in response to an inquiry for yard sticks, he brought the customer carpet tacks. A more excusable case occurred with the shipping clerk, who came to one of the regular clerks to find out what "will oil" was, and where he would find the best kind. Upon interrogating the customer, who was an Irishman, he said: "It's best oil I'm wanted," which was his way of pronouncing bicycle oil.—Hardware.

THE ELECTION.

The Republicans would still have a majority of 4. Should the majority on joint ballot be even a few votes Democrats with the House. Republicans, enough Democrats would probably be unseated to turn the scale on joint ballot and secure the United States Senator. It looks like the hair will go with the hogs.

The Democrats appear to have elected the following senators: First District, T. J. Elmore; 3rd, Benton Sims; 5th, N. P. Taylor; 11th, J. S. Lay; 15th, C. C. McChord; 21st, P. C. Smith; 23rd, B. B. Brown; 27th, C. J. Bronston; 35th, J. M. Saulsbury. Hopkinsville, 14, Total, 23.

The Republicans have: 7th, A. D. Jones; 9th, H. G. Petrie; 13th, C. J. Walton; 19th, W. H. Jones; 25th, W. J. Hissem; 29th, J. A. Bennett; 31st, A. D. Hummels; 33rd, Wm. Dingus; 37th, C. Stege; 41st, H. D. Jones. Total 14. 17th district not settled.

THE CITY ELECTION.

Here at Least We Find Some Grains of Comfort.

Below will be found the figures in the races for city councilmen in Hopkinsville. The Democrats elect six members, all of their nominees. The Republicans retain the member from the Fifth ward. Those marked with an asterisk are new men, the others were re-elected:

Two Deaths Near Pembroke.

PEMBROKE, Nov. 5.—Died at his home on the farm of J. H. Williams near this place, Nov. 4, of typhoid fever, Ed Slaughter, col., aged 37 years. He was highly respected by both white and colored, and bore the name of an upright, honest and honorable Christian and had been a consistent member of the M. E. church for eighteen years.
Died at his home near Salubria, Nov. 5, of pneumonia, Mr. W. B. Yancey, an aged and highly respected citizen. Interment at Rosedale cemetery at 2 p. m. Nov. 6.

Black Bear Story.

A sensational rumor comes from Dunbar's Cave. It is said that a big, ferocious black bear is terrorizing the natives in the neighborhood. Bruin is said to have attacked two colored men, Louis Bowling and Peter Kirk, and killed four farmers' dogs. The bear has his lair somewhere near the mouth of the cave, it is said. A good many persons are said to have seen the bear.

Trigg County Hunters.

The Cadiz Hunting club, 16 strong with Col. John D. Shaw, captain, will leave next Tuesday for their annual fall hunt "Between the Rivers." They will take along four servants, about twenty-five dogs, several wagons and plenty of provisions to last for two weeks. Game is reported plentiful in the hunting section and the members of the club are anticipating some fine sport "in the coolings."

Gone to Reelfoot Lake.

The Blue Wing Hunting Club, of Clarksville, have gone to Reelfoot Lake, where they will spend ten days or two weeks hunting. The club usually goes to the upper end of the lake, but will go to the lower end this year owing to the low water at the upper end caused by the continued drought.

Lost Four Hogs.

TREXTON, Nov. 7.—Last night hog thieves got in their work here carrying off four fine porkers belonging to Mr. Cole Dickerson. No positive trace of the thieves' hogs has been discovered, but it is thought that they were carried off in the direction of Clarksville.

Flower seeds will be held in several towns.

SUSPENDED ANIMATION.

How to Save Life After Electrical Shock.

An Engineer Suggests That the Majority of Cases Now Thought to Be Fatal May Now Necessarily Be So—His Idea Developed.

Mr. Henry Wiegand, an electrical engineer, said not long since to a Baltimore Sun man that in his opinion several of the men whose deaths in Baltimore recently were due to electrical shock had only been thrown into a state of suspended animation, from which they could have been revived if intelligent and prompt aid had been given.

"As the question whether or not a man meets with instant death when he comes in contact with a high-tension electric light wire," said Mr. Wiegand, "the public generally, judging from experience, believes this to be the case. Science, in the light of modern investigation, denies it and asserts that many persons who have been shocked in this manner, and thereby sent to an untimely grave, should now be enjoying life and pushing their vocations as they were before such an accident happened."

"The first effect of a current of high tension is to produce a state of syncope, or suspended animation; then if the current is continued longer and passes in great quantity through the vital organs of the body there ensues a laceration of the more delicate membranes and tissues, and the blood, changed in character, passes out of its usual channels, engorging in the different organs and causing absolute death. This last condition is not the usual one, and only obtains by design, as in legal electrocutions or in a few other cases."

"In the first class of cases, through the sudden and extraordinary character of the excitement of the nerve centers, a sudden arrest of the respiratory and heart muscles is produced and the patient rests in a state of suspension, such as we are familiar with in the case of a drowning person. The means of resuscitation to be used are similar to those prescribed in drowning cases, with the exception that as the subject has no water in his lungs no measures need be used to expel it."

"The first thing to do is to lay the man on his back and place a roll of clothing under his shoulders, so as to prop up his spine and drop his head backward, leaving his chest to expand and contract freely. The operator should then kneel at the head of the patient, in a line with the head and feet, and grasping the elbows, draw them well over the patient's head, so as to bring them almost together above it, and hold them there for a few seconds. They carry them down to the sides and front of the chest, firmly compressing it by resting weight upon them. After two or three seconds the arms are again carried above the head and the same maneuver is repeated at the rate of about fifteen times per minute. At the same time the tongue must be drawn out to free the throat."

"This manipulation stimulates respiration in the following manner: When the arms are extended over the head the chest walls are expanded just as in inspiration, and if the throat is clear the air will rush into the lungs. When the arms are brought down to the sides of the chest, compressing it, air is expelled, just as in expiration and artificial respiration. In performing this operation the performer must proceed with methodical deliberation and not spasmodically or halfheartedly."

"In addition to the above, if an assistant is at hand, the tongue, held by a cloth or handkerchief to prevent it from slipping, should be drawn out forcibly each time the arms are extended over the head and allowed to recede when the arms are returned to the chest. This rhythmic traction of the tongue, besides keeping the throat passage open, assists in stimulating natural respiration."

"The treatment should be kept up until the arrival of a physician, who may direct that it be continued, or in case of its not being vigorous enough may resort to more extreme measures, such as the stretching of the splinter muscle with each inspiratory movement.

"If these measures were more generally known and were instantly put into practice in cases of shock from electric wires or lightning, undoubtedly we should hear less frequently of fatal accidents caused by electricity."

The Aluminum Output.

The output of aluminum has increased from 223 pounds in 1893 to 550,000 pounds in 1895. The cost of production has been decreased from nearly $10 per pound to less than 60 cents per pound. The output for 1894 was valued at $316,250.—Hardware.

A NEW YORK STREET RACKET.

But the Man Who Tried to Work It Was Fooled for Once.

I was looking into a show window one day on Ann street when a young man of good address stepped up on my left, and while seeming to give all his attention to the window, he whispered:

"Stranger, I want to say something to you. Don't turn your head, and don't exhibit surprise."

"Is an anarchist about to hit me in the back with a bomb?" I asked.

"Oh, no. I wish to say to you, sir, that what has driven me to commit an offense against the law."

"And you want to trade hats with me to disguise yourself?"

"No, sir. I committed a theft, but nobody even suspects me. I stole twelve pairs of eye-glasses, and have sold all but this one pair. If you have any use for them I'll make the price a dollar."

"Isn't that pretty steep?"

"Why, sir, a pair of eye-glasses like these would cost you six dollars at any oculist's. I'll slip them into your hand and you try 'em on. You don't look like a man who would give an unfortunate away."

"You are perfectly safe with me. How often do you think this game has been tried on me in the last year?"

"Game, sir—game?"

"Yes. The glasses are made in Columbus, O., and sold here for ten cents a pair. There are about fifty of you chaps working the 'thief' racket to work off the glasses. It catches lots of folks, but after buying twenty pairs I quit."

"Sir! do you doubt my word?" he demanded.

"Of course, I do."

"Then, sir, let me tell you that—"

"There, that will do! See that old chap across the street looking at the clothes in the window. Go over and work him."

"Sir! You have called me a liar and—"

"Of course, you are a liar. Go and work the old man."

"Darned if I don't," he said, and he looked up with a grin, and thirty minutes later when I saw the old man in front of the Sun office he was tucking away four pairs of eye-glasses and carrying a grin all over his face.—Detroit Free Press.

Hopkinsville's Young Authors.

The little book of stories by Miss Florence Frances Brasher, which was recently put on the market here, is spoken of in words of high commendation by all who have read it. There are three stories, "In a Day of Darkness," "Where Deep Waters Flowed," and "A Bitter Lesson." The two first are novelettes of fifty or more pages, the last a short story. They are all written in a charming style, entirely free from affectation and bombast, common errors that young authors fall into. Her descriptions are well executed and not overdone. Her characters well drawn and the plots admirably developed. On the whole the stories are interesting in their subject matter, pure in conception and delineated in well chosen words. We regard the young author as a girl of unusual talent—for she is still little more than a child—and the people of Hopkinsville, when they consider that she is dependent upon her pen for a livelihood, should encourage and aid her by helping her to dispose of the entire edition of her meritorious little book. It sells at 50c at the book stores, or may be ordered by mail.

When a Chinese editor writes and prints something objectionable to the emperor, that dignitary doesn't go around to the printing office and demand a retraction. He has a more satisfactory and expeditious plan, and that is to order the offending editor turned over to the "High Executioner," who proceeds to chop off his head. The Pekin (China) Gazette has been running 1,000 years, and during that brief time seventeen editors have been beheaded. An American editor would not be permitted to run a newspaper in China long enough to read the proof of his salutatory.

NANCY HANKS GRAVE.
 Meeting Place of Lincoln's Mother Marked by a Simple Stone.

In traveling to Louisville on the Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis railroad, a traveler passes almost unnoticed the small town of Lincoln, in Spencer county, southern Indiana. The place derives its name from the old homestead of Abraham Lincoln's father, the farm lying half a mile or so from the railroad depot. The mother of the martyr president is buried here in a thickly wooded spot, within a stone's throw of where one stood Lincoln's father's log cabin. A plain, white tombstone, surrounded by a neat fence, marks the place where her ashes lie. The tombstone has the following plain inscription:

NANCY HANKS LINCOLN,
 Mother of President Lincoln.

 Age 33 Years.

PHOTOGRAPHIC WONDER.
 A Frenchman's Apparatus for Taking Submarine Pictures.

Mr. Louis Bouton has made some interesting experiments in submarine photography. He is an ardent student of zoology, and during the investigation he made in the waters of the Mediterranean he was so impressed with the beauty of the lights offered that he concluded to make some effort to represent them by pictures as well as by words. His first experiments were made at a slight distance from the surface of the water, where the intensity of the light is still sufficient for the production of photographs; he constructed a camera and an instantaneous shutter especially adapted for use in water. HOPKINSVILLE MARKET.
(Reported Nov. 6, '95, by J. H. Bagleton, of At-ford Lewis & Co., local dealers.)

On account of the absence of several of the buyers from the city last week there were no public sales. The offerings this week 24 hds., and only 4 hds. were sold. Receipts were the smallest for the year, 5 hds. Weather still very dry and no handling season as yet. The sales are practically at an end until we have a season, as the small stock on sale is but little over 200 hds., and they are re-used non-descript tobacco. The loose buyers are doing nothing on account of the drouth of the weed. It is the impression with the planters, on account of the damage of the worm cut and frost, that prices will be higher for the 1896 crop. I wish to say there is no good grounds to base the impression on whatever. When we see how low prices are in foreign markets and the Regie men have already delivered 2 years supply at the present what prices will be equally as good on all grades of tobacco on this market as say they and the facility for handling and taking care of will be very good as there is a large additional house in course of erection and will be prepared to handle 300,000 hds., besides the large loose purchases that will be made. I wish to prevail on the planters to improve on the quality and not in quantity, which will best serve their interests.

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectively cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation.
It has given satisfaction to millions and has met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

MATRIMONIAL.

COX-REYNOLDS.—Mr. Herbert
Cox, a prominent young Gracey farmer, and Miss Fannie Lou Reynolds, daughter of Mr. C. C. Reynolds, were married at Shiloh church at 4:30 p. m.
Wednesday. A reception was tendered the couple at night by Mrs. Nannie F. Cox, mother of the groom.

GOODLETT-GARROTT.—Mr. A. G.
Goodlett, Jr., of Nashville, and Miss Lucy Garrott, of Longview, were united in marriage Wednesday, at 3 p. m. The happy event took place at Locust Grove church, near the Square. Immediately after the ceremony the couple were driven to this city, where after partaking of lunch at Hotel Latham, they left for Nashville, their future home.

COX-VAUGHAN.—At the home of the bride's parents, on South Center street, Tuesday night, Mr. Walter Cox and Miss Georgia Vaughan were united in marriage. Rev. King, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, officiating. Only a few of the friends of the contracting parties were present to witness the happy event.

The groom is an energetic young mechanic, who has been in the employ of Forbes & Bro. for several years and is a clever gentleman, with many friends.

His bride is the daughter of Mr. W.
T. Vaughan and is a lady of much beauty and is quite popular with her large list of acquaintances.

The young couple will board for the present.

A CHILD ENJOYS

The pleasant flavor, gentle and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs when in need of laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known, and every family should have a bottle on hand.

C. R. Graham is Trouble.

C. R. Graham, who spent several months here as agent for the National Collecting Agency, is under arrest here on a warrant from his agency.
It is not exactly clear what the complaint is. It is said they deny that he is their agent. Graham has wired the agency to know what the trouble is and is being guarded until a reply comes. He is a young man of pleasant address who came here from Owensboro.

LATER: The charges against Mr.
Graham were dismissed by Judge Brent's and he returned to Paducah this morning.

Good advice. Never leave the house on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by R.
C. Hardwick, druggist.
